RARE NEW DAYLILIES

Daylilies have undergone a period of development in the past few years, causing much excitement in the flower world. Astounding new colors and combination of colors have been created by the great efforts of Hybridizers. The plant breeders have given us size, substance and branching. Daylilies now rank number one in the perennial field. They can be grown in any part of the country, tolerating all sorts of weather conditions.

CULTURE

Daylilies are very easily grown without any fuss or coddling, but like any other flower, if one would like fine giant blooms, it is best to grow them in a well drained soil mixed thoroughly with plenty of oak leaf-mold, cow manure or peat. Add a handful of bonemeal to each plant. Plant crown of Daylily one inch beneath soil surface. Place plants about every two to three feet apart. Daylilies can be left alone without dividing for five to fifteen years. Each year feed with a sidedressing of complete fertilizer. Give plants plenty of sunshine and water. Summer mulch is ideal for Daylilies as for most plants. Use salt hay, chopped straw or corn cobs and sawdust. When using sawdust as a summer mulch, add five pounds of Agrinite or Cotton seed meal to every one hundred square feet in order to supply nitrogen loss used by bacteria in order to decompose the sawdust. Soil should be kept at a Ph 5.4 to 5.8.
